Disability Rights is a passion of mine, and as someone with a disability, it is imperative for me to strive to make a difference. While ADA has only scratched the surface of the systematic changes that need to be done to accommodate individuals with disabilities appropriately, it is important to also educate and provide resources for individuals and families who do not know where to go or what to do once a diagnosis is made, especially as one transitions to adult services. It is also important to educate the local, federal, and global community to the rights and needs of those with disabilities, to both break stigmas and promote independence and community participation.
